SETTLING AN ESTATE ADVANTAGE OF FINANCIAL MINDS

A great deal of responsibility must fall upon an individual executor or trustee of a will which directs the payment of legacies or annuities.

To produce sufficient income for the purpose, a reinvestment of certain funds may be necessary. If an individual is appointed, he must shoulder his difficult duty alone.

A Trust Company—with its many financial minds—faces equal responsibility, but is better equipped by experience to meet it.

To know how to invest funds so that they will yield as large an income as is consistent with absolute safety of the principal, is one of the specialized every-day functions of this Company.

OPINION AND COMMENT

Close ranks, forward!

This command, issued by the Trustees at their special meeting in Raleigh on June 16th in the election of Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase to the presidency, and most heartily received by faculty, student body, and alumni, brought to a fortunate close an unprecedentedly fateful and critical year in the history of the University, and gave confident assurance to the State that its chief educational institution, though profoundly shocked by the loss of Graham, Stacy, and Battle, and the confusion incident to the world war, had recovered its stride, and awaited, eager, strong, and united, the opportunity to enter the wider field of service which lies before it.

Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, chairman of the faculty since the

of president immediately following his election on Monday of Commencement week, is well known to the alumni who have attended the University during the past ten years and to the readers of THE REVIEW who have kept in close touch with the work of the University in recent years. Coming to the University in September, 1910, as professor of the Philosophy of Education, Dr. Chase immediately impressed the University community as a man of strength and quickly adjusted himself to the program of work in which the University was engaged. In 1914 the title of his professorship was changed to that of professor of Psychology, and upon the death of President Graham, he was appointed acting dean of the College of Liberal Arts. In January, upon the death of Dean Stacy, he was appointed chairman of the faculty, which position he filled so acceptably that the Trustees were convinced that they would find in him the proper successor to President Graham.

In coming to the presidency, Dr. Chase brings to his highly responsible office a sound scholarship and wide knowledge of educational technique. During his undergraduate days at Dartmouth College, Massachusetts (from which he graduated in 1904 and received his A. M. in 1908), he won the reputation of being a brilliant student. In 1910 he received the degree of Ph.D. from Clark University where he pursued graduate courses in Education and Philosophy for two years. In the fall of 1910 he became professor of Educational Psychology in the University and in that position and the later position of professor of Psychology, has been a constant student of educational and philosophical subjects. He has been a frequent contributor to educational and philosophical publications and has been an influential member of societies interested in the promotion of

Fortunately for the University, President Chase has acquired a very definite conception of the institution whose leadership has been intrusted to him and of the service which North Carolina expects it to render. In addition to being a member of the general faculty, Dr. Chase has served with especial effectiveness on the curriculum and Graduate School committees of the University, has come in close touch with the teachers of the State through service on the faculties of the School of Education and the Summer School, and through service with the Extension committee since its inception has visualized the educational scene in the North Carolina of today. As an investigator of the school systems of the State, as a lecturer in the Extension service of the University, and as a member of the Executive committee of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly, he has come to understand North Carolina and the high mission which the University is to fill in its life. And more recently, while serving as a member of the Students' Army Training Corps committee, as acting dean, and chairman of the faculty, he has been tested in the larger affairs of University administration with general satisfaction to his colleagues and the Trustees.

Likewise, President Chase is characterized by many qualities of mind and heart that augur well for the future. He is easily approached; his sympathies are broad and genuine; he grasps the essentials of matters quickly; he speaks with clarity and distinction; he is tactful in his dealings with members of the student body and faculty; and in the important administrative duties of his office has proven himself to be a thoughtful, judicious executive. In the community and church life at Chapel Hill he has been a positive force; and, to repeat our statement above, he enters upon his new office with the hearty support of the entire University.

With the tragedy and confusion of the year left behind; with the uncertainty as to the headship of the University happily terminated; with the signing of the peace treaty at hand; with the field of opportunity for service widening hourly, the order given by the Trustees is peculiarly fitting—Close ranks, forward!

For years THE REVIEW has longed for an Alumni Day approximating that just passed which easily is entitled to the epithet "the best ever."

ALUMNI DAY To begin with, there were alumni here—some six hundred of them. Furthermore, there were classes like 1899 and 1909 and 1918 with from 25 to 50 members present. Other classes running back to the late fifties and the sixties were in evidence, with all classes in between represented. And there were quarters in the dormitories and the infirmary for all comers and good fare at Commons. And furthermore, the Carolina Playmakers gave two splendid plays which were so attractive that some half dozen or dozen Trustees broke away from the meeting to see "Peggy" and "What Will Barbara Say?"

The big thing, however, apart from the luncheon and the speech-making accompanying it, was the spirit which breathed throughout the reunion of the men in service and the alumni conference. Fifty-five Carolina men made the supreme sacrifice in the war, and their fellows, both in the service and without, paused to pay them honor. And in the alumni conference, President Connor, of the Association, together with all the members of the Association, assured President Chase of the united support of every Carolina man.

As an outgrowth of the alumni conference, which was addressed by R. D. W. Connor, President Chase, A. M. Coates, W. T. Shore, L. R. Wilson, and E. R. Rankin, the following proposals were embodied in the report of the committee on resolutions for the consideration of the alumni during the coming year. They are so important that they are reproduced as drafted by Messrs. I. C. Wright, Jones Fuller, T. S. Rollins, Lawrence McRae, and A. L. Cox, of the committee.

1. That we heartily indorse the action of the Trustees in the election of Dr. H. W. Chase, president of the University, and pledge to him and the University the loyal and unstinted support of every alumnus, and cordially invite him to call on us for any assistance or co-operation that he may deem helpful in bringing the University to her full measure of usefulness.

2. We heartily indorse the establishment of the Graham Memorial Building, believing that it will satisfy a real need in University life. We suggest that the alumni council adopt ways and means of bringing this matter to the attention of the alumni generally, and suggest that they set out the need for the building and the uses it will serve. We feel that Dr. Graham was instrumental in bringing to North Carolina the feeling that the University was everybody's University, and was created to serve everybody. This building will typify that idea, and all alumni we have no doubt will deem it a privilege to help erect it and perpetuate and energize the idea in the life of our people.

3. That steps be taken leading to the establishment of a system for keeping on hand, available at all times, accurate information concerning all of the alumni. This bureau of information, established at the University, should keep in touch with the alumni and be able to furnish the correct address and other pertinent up-to-date information about every alumnus.

4. That county alumni associations be organized in every county which does not at present have an association and wherever practicable outside the State. There are at present 58 local alumni associations in the State and eight outside. Thirty-two counties have no associations.

5. That steps be taken for increasing the circulation of THE ALUMNI REVIEW, so as to make this circulation more nearly commensurate with the size of the alumni body. At present the total number of subscribers is 2,750, while the alumni body numbers 10,000.

6. That meetings of the local associations be held frequently throughout the year.

7. That an annual convention of class and local alumni secretaries be held.

8. That support of the alumni to the Alumni Loyalty Fund be enlisted as a regular policy.

9. That a complete war record of Carolina alumni be compiled.

Quite naturally Alma Mater does not make special distinction among her sons, but THE REVIEW is going to venture the intimation IMPARTIAL—BUT APPRECIATIVE that she is particularly appreciative of the thoughtfulness of three of the classes during the year and the commencement season just ended. Throughout the demoralization incident to the S. A. T. C., the influenza, the loss of president and dean, the class of 1919 never wavered in its devotion to the ideals and spirit of Carolina. However dark the hour, it was at hand ready to do its bit. Similarly, 1918, through its membership on the campus, lent itself to the maintenance of morale, and on Alumni Day returned forty strong to assure Alma Mater that its youth and hopefulness were at her disposal. And 1909, after five years of absence, returned, with wives and children, and friends, and a check for $1,000 to add to the Alumni Loyalty Fund, and, with what is even more fundamental—the purpose to serve to the end. Again, we say, Alma Mater is impartial—but appreciative.

THE REVIEW always welcomes suggestions from the alumni, and it is particularly gratified to have the sort offered by Mr. J. W. Umstead, JOIN NOW of the class of 1909, looking to the sending of new men to the University on the part of alumni. His proposal, made at the Alumni Luncheon, is that a special club be founded by the alumni, the secretary of which shall be the person regularly employed by the University to conduct the campaign for new students, the president and vice-presidents of which shall be those alumni who have influenced the highest and next highest number of new men to enter the University during the year. The organization is to be a Send-Your-Man Club, and Mr. Umstead wants to see every alumnus striving for the posts of honor.

THE REVIEW wishes to lay special emphasis upon the following matters of alumni interest which should receive particular attention during the summer.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

1. Messrs. E. R. Rankin and R. W. Madry will represent the University in the campaign for new students; for increased support of THE REVIEW; and for information concerning alumni for use in the compilation of alumni records.

2. Mr. A. M. Coates will continue the direction of the Graham Memorial Fund. Local directors throughout the State are urged to give him hearty co-operation.

3. The Treasurer of the University is authorized to receive contributions for the Alumni Loyalty Fund.

4. Mr. A. M. Coates can supply copies of Education and Citizenship, by President Graham, at $1.50 per copy.

Information that the Board of Trustees authorized an increase in salaries (to become effective September first), approximating INCREASE IN SALARIES fifteen per cent. in the case of instructors, assistant professors, and associate professors, and ten per cent. in the case of full professors, will be gladly received by the alumni. It will also be of interest to them to know that within the five-year period, October 1, 1914–October 1, 1919 (the high cost of living period), the total flat increases, including the one just authorized, but excluding special increases authorized in particular cases, promotions in rank, and Kenan professorships, will be approximately twenty-five per cent!

In this connection we reproduce several paragraphs from the Minnesota Alumni Weekly of May 26 based upon the action of the regents of that institution. They are worthy of the consideration by Trustees and alumni alike. Read them:

The thing of greatest interest to faculty members was the increases in salaries, which totaled $173,412. The deans and administrative officers came in for $5,650; full professors received an advance of $26,000; associate professors, $13,050; assistant professors, $37,800; instructors, $28,400.

The next largest item of increase was for one hundred and nineteen clerks and stenographers, who received an advance totaling $12,069.

The largest increases, and the most numerous, went to the members of the teaching staff who were receiving under $2,500—$124,672 going to those in this class. Those who had been receiving above $2,500 a year received a total increase of $40,900.

Five hundred and sixty-nine persons receive advances in salary ranging all the way from $5 a month to $1,000 a year, which was the largest amount given anyone.

The skies look clearer and the sun shines brighter today for these individuals.

ALUMNI DAY IS FEATURE OF UNIVERSITY'S 124th COMMENCEMENT

Carolina's Sons Come Back to the Hill in Large Numbers. Class and Victory Reunions Score Big Success

Featured by a big general meeting of the Alumni Association; by ten special class reunions of classes ranging from 1859 to 1918; by the Victory Reunion of alumni from service; by the Alumni Luncheon; and by the performance of the "Carolina Playmakers," the celebration of Alumni Day, Tuesday, June 17th, proved to be the biggest feature of commencement. The largest number of alumni who have revisited the University within recent years came back for Alumni Day. The alumni returned in fine spirit to renew college friendships, to come into more intimate touch with their Alma Mater, and to show their readiness to back the University in its new undertakings.

Mr. R. D. W. Connor, of the class of 1899, president of the General Alumni Association, presided over the meeting of the Association, which was held in Gerrard Hall at 10:45 o'clock on the morning of Alumni Day. Mr. Connor assured President Chase that he would have the hearty and steadfast support of the Alumni Association in his work as President of the institution, and introduced President Chase to the audience.

President Chase Addresses Alumni Association

President Chase addressed the General Alumni Association as follows:

It is my privilege today, in behalf of the University of North Carolina, to welcome you back once more to this your well-loved home. From overseas, from duty in the camps, from all this wide country of ours, you have come back to us today. There is nothing perfunctory about our welcome. It comes from the hearts of all of us. You are at home again—at home on this quiet campus, with all its wealth of tradition and its charm. May we to whose hands the care of this University is committed be found worthy of maintaining the rich heritage you have left us. May we realize in some measure the high destiny you have dreamed for Alma Mater, the far goals you have set for her. Men of Carolina, welcome home!

President Chase Reviews Year

The president of the Alumni Association has asked me to tell you something about the year on the campus which is just now closing. I think it is altogether fitting that this should be done. Never has the University known such a year—never, we trust, will she know such another. Three of the greatest of Carolina's sons have gone from us. Within a few short months Graham, and Stacy, and Battle passed to their reward. This is not the time nor the place to set forth the services of these men. I know we cannot think of them as dead. The sweet and gentle spirit of Dr. Battle, that modest, four-square righteous life that was Stacy's, the vision and the passion for democracy and the altogether lovely soul that were Graham's—these live forever in our hearts, they are a part of the very air we breathe here today. Out of our tragedies there has come, I think, a renewed consecration to all that Carolina is and stands for. The sons of this University have rallied to her in her dark hour. Students and faculty, alumni and friends, have all set themselves the task of wresting what might be of victory from the jaws of defeat. That we have come through—as I think we have come through—this bitter time with the spirit of Carolina still strong and free, is due to not one group of men—it is due to the united effort of the sons of Carolina everywhere.

Made College a Military Camp

We began the year with a dedication of the college to the most stupendous educational experiment the world has ever known. Men have often remarked that the college had little in the way of a definite standard by which it could judge of the success or failure of its training. But during the last two years it has had a standard—the altogether practical and unsentimental standard of war. And, judged by that standard, the college has met its responsibilities. It has proven the great source of raw material for leaders in war as in peace. So marked was the impression made by college men upon the leaders of the army that, faced by the emergency need for more and more material capable of being quickly moulded into officers, they asked us, as they did the other colleges of the country, to place ourselves under government control for the duration of the war. This we did gladly. Our dormitories became barracks, our commons a mess-hall, courses in war issues and gas engines and camp sanitation replaced Latin and Greek and philosophy. Emerson Field resounded, not to foot-ball signals, but to the commands of "Fours right!" Men rose with the sun, went to bed—imagine it—at ten o'clock, after a day spent in washing windows, peeling potatoes, drilling in close order formation—with occasional class attendance and possibly a bit of study now and then.

Then came the influenza. The infirmary was filled to overflowing, the fraternity houses commandeered for hospitals.

Thanks to the efficient handling of the students by the members of the medical faculty, our student losses were light. Three of our young men—splendid fellows every one of them—gave their lives here as truly for their country as though they had died on the field of battle. And may I pause here for a moment to pay tribute to the self-sacrificing devotion of Miss Bessie C. Roper, who, serving in Chapel Hill at the time as a trained nurse, volunteered her services to the infirmary, and laid down her life that others might live. Her memory will be forever cherished in our hearts.

Of the great tragedy which that epidemic brought to the University and to the state in the loss of President Graham, words are far too inadequate to tell. I can only say that we have tried as best we could to meet it in the spirit which I know he would have had us meet it—not in a mood of blind discouragement, but as a challenge to show in this dark extremity the stuff of which Carolina is made.

The epidemic was waning when our S.A.T.C. received its second blow in the signing of the armistice. At once all incentive for our men to make good in a military way was gone. The story of the effort we all made to try to keep up the morale in this group of men would be worth the telling if time allowed. Those of you who were in camp when the armistice was signed might multiply your own feelings by ten and get a fairly correct idea of the state of mind of our men here.

And so our experience with the S.A.T.C. came to an end. The experiment had been a daring one. To graft on the free, responsible, self-governing life of this campus the military attitude with all that it signifies was a task of no mean dimensions. There had not been time to work out the necessary adjustments. Military needs had perforce to take precedence, and the healthy spirit of the campus inevitably suffered. But the ardor with which the whole institution threw itself into the work of transforming the college almost overnight cannot be too highly commended. The spirit of service was everywhere. It is little wonder that, their feet treading such unfamiliar paths, our students should, for the time, have lost something of their initiative, should have, we sometimes feared, been a little too content to let others do their thinking for them.

Rebuilding Carolina Morale

Such was the situation which confronted Chairman Stacy when college reopened after Christmas. The quiet, tactful, effective way in which he dealt with it is beyond praise. Most fortunately our older students, who had been scattered in all branches of the service, soon began to return in considerable numbers. Their grasp of the situation, their feeling of their own responsibility, their co-operation, has been a constant joy to us all.

The college staggered when Mr. Stacy was taken from us, but its vitality was strong enough to sustain even this second shock. Just how deep the roots of this University go down, just how sound and how healthy its whole life is, I think we have scarcely realized until this year. Those who have builded it have moulded it into what it is, have done their work far better than they themselves could have dreamed. The outstanding testimony to this work and to the passion and insight with which President Graham had devoted himself and this institution to the service of the state, has been the action of the General Assembly in increasing our annual maintenance appropriation to $215,000 during the next two years. This generous action imposes upon the University a burden of increased responsibility which the University has, I think, accepted with a full sense of its importance. Among faculty and students alike there has been full recognition of the fact that no institution, and especially no institution with the opportunities which lie before us, can stand still at the critical period of history. The S.A.T.C. at least set us to examining our own educational theories, to trying to sum up in our minds what the war has taught us, of where we have succeeded and where we have failed. In the trials of the times which lie before us every educational institution must learn or die. We have done much this spring in the way of altering our courses of study and our methods, which I will not detail here. Our educational life is, I think, once more flowing freely.

And I believe I can say the same of our campus life. There have been few experiences so stimulating and so altogether worth while as those which have attended the steady come-back of the college spirit among the men on the Hill this spring. It has put heart and soul and life into all of us to see the magnificent fashion in which the students have responded to every call we have made on them. The honor system is once more in full operation, interpreted and enforced by a student council of unusual quality. A "campus cabinet" (successor to the "Greater Council") has been formed, to deal in a constructive fashion with the problems of campus life. It has done much this spring, and its work will continue and increase. The democratic spirit of our life here has, I think, grown and broadened as the months have passed.

In athletics the season has not only been successful, but it has been characterized by a clean, wholesome, sportsmanlike spirit throughout. It has seen the renewal of relations with two of our sister institutions—a happy omen for the future. Coach Campbell, who has been absent in the service, returns to us in the fall, and we may confidently look forward to a year of athletic success and of high standards.

We have, I think, won back our Carolina—the Carolina we all love so well. May she grow ever into new strength and beauty as the years go by!

And now it only remains for me, before this company of the sons of Carolina, to pledge myself, heart and soul and body, to the welfare of this University. God grant I may prove worthy of your trust!

Graham Memorial Fund Presented

President Connor next introduced Mr. Albert M. Coates, Secretary of the Graham Memorial Fund Campaign. Mr. Coates showed that the Graham Memorial building would fill a great social need and stated that to the present time $70,000 had been subscribed to the Fund. He pointed out that indications were for the success of the campaign, but urged the active co-operation of all the alumni to the end that the campaign be not a half-hearted success, but a full and complete success.

Dr. Louis R. Wilson, editor of THE ALUMNI REVIEW, made an appeal for the support of this publication. He said that THE REVIEW was established seven years ago to inform the scattered alumni of what was being done at the University and to serve as a medium of keeping the alumni in touch with one another.

1879'S REUNION REPRESENTATION

W. T. Shore, of the class of 1905, of Charlotte, discussed the Alumni Loyalty Fund. This fund now amounts to $10,000, Mr. Shore stated. It was begun four years ago when the class of 1905 handed to President Graham a check for $1,000 to go to the Fund. Mr. Shore stated the class of 1905 was making plans to present the Alumni Loyalty Fund with another gift, this time for a minimum of $2,500.

E. R. Rankin, Secretary of the Alumni Association, suggested ways by which the General Alumni Association could widen its scope and influence. The suggestions made were later incorporated in resolutions passed by the General Alumni Association.

The Alumni Luncheon

The Alumni Luncheon was held at 1 P. M. in Swain Hall with an attendance of 500. Alumni spirit and class spirit ran high at the luncheon and the occasion was a most happy one. Judge Robert W. Winston, of the class of 1879, served as toastmaster. Music was rendered by the orchestra as the luncheon was served. Cheers by the classes holding re-unions frequently resounded through the hall. Responses were made for the reunion classes by Capt. Edmund Jones, of the class of 1869, of Lenoir; Judge Francis D. Winston, of the class of 1879, of Windsor; Charles A. Webb, of the class of 1889, of Asheville; Judge W. F. Harding, of the class of 1894, of Charlotte; T. Gilbert Pearson, of the class of 1899, of New York; J. W. Umstead, Jr., of the class of 1909, of Greensboro.

J. Martin Fleming Represents '59

Only one man was present to represent the class of 1859, Mr. J. Martin Fleming, of Raleigh. Mr. James P. Coffin, of Batesville, Ark., was prevented from attending the reunion, but sent a message expressing his love for the University and his interest in the 60-year reunion of his class.

Four Survivors of '69 Present

Four men were present for the reunion of the class of 1869. These were: Capt. Edmund Jones, Lenoir; Alexander Graham, Charlotte; John W. Fries, Winston-Salem, and W. H. Maverick, San Antonio, Texas.

The Reunion of Service Alumni

Major L. P. McLendon, of the class of 1912, of Durham, presided over the victory reunion of alumni who have returned from service. This reunion was held in Gerrard Hall at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of Alumni Day. It was a commencement feature of unusual interest and was largely attended.

Major McLendon read the list of alumni in service, which list is appended below. It shows that 2,285 Carolina alumni were in the military and naval service of the United States. Final returns will no doubt show, Major McLendon stated, that the list of Carolina men in service approximated 3,000. Major McLendon also read the list of Carolina alumni who gave up their lives in service.

Lieut. Col. E. A. Abernethy, Lieut. Don MacRae, Col. Albert L. Cox, Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, and General Julian S. Carr made brief speeches. All of the speakers paid high tribute to the part paid by the University and her sons in the world war.

Secretary Daniels was extremely interested in and proud of the record made by his Alma Mater. "The future of the Republic is in your keeping," the speaker told the ex-soldiers before him. Since victory had been won in war, he urged that no less strenuous efforts be put forth to achieve victory in peace.

Glancing at the University's service flag which showed that 2,285 Carolina alumni and students entered military service, and that 55 made the supreme sacrifice, Secretary Daniels declared, "these men never will be dead, because they are not forgotten."

General Carr paid tribute to the valor and fortitude of the Confederate soldier and referred to the part taken in the Civil War by University alumni.

SECRETARY LANE IS COMMENCEMENT DAY SPEAKER

Introduced by Secretary Daniels---Degrees Conferred on Eighty-Seven Candidates---Medals and Prizes Awarded---LL. D. for Lane

"Ours in America is not a work of reconstruction but rather of 'carrying on,'" Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane told the vast capacity-taxing audience that assembled in Memorial Hall for the Commencement Day final exercises on Wednesday, June 18th. "The morale of this nation is stronger, not weaker, for our war adventure. We were walking in the right way before, and now we shall go faster," he said. "This country now hears itself proclaimed as the greatest of world powers. We are not what we were. We have done things we believed impossible and we are not unconscious or indifferent of our fortunes. But the wine of military glory has not gone to our head.

"But our years of test are before us and not behind us," he cautioned. "The creation of a happier society" was the central theme running throughout the address of the distinguished cabinet member, which had as its subject "An Adventure and Its Lessons."

LL.D. Degree for Lane

The honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred on Secretary Lane, following his address. Eighty-seven graduates of the University were handed their degrees by Governor Bickett. Five women students were among the recipients, one getting a law and another an M. A. degree.

At 11:30 the march of the academic procession to Memorial hall, where the exercises were held, began. It was headed by Col. Joseph Hyde Pratt, faculty marshal, and Josh Tayloe, chief student marshal, followed by Secretary Lane and President Chase, and Governor Bickett and Secretary Daniels. Then came the faculty and members of the graduating class.

The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. Maynard Marshall, President Chase presiding.

Daniels Introduces Lane

Secretary Daniels' speech of introduction of Secretary Lane embodied a noble tribute to the part played by the college men in the world war. "Out among the great mass of Americans there was the feeling that the college men were soft and lacking in the stern qualities that grappled with great issues and hardships. If anybody wanted to know whether the college man was fit, this war was the answer. Every college in America was the muster ground. The students forgot their caps and gowns for the khaki and gun. The training for citizenship and sacrifice in the college was demonstrated by the splendid leadership of college men on the battlefield and battleships.

"Educational institutions met the challenge of war; they must meet the challenge of peace. The dangers that face America are now insidious along the line of junkerism that seeks to defeat the will of this war that the world must be made safe for liberty."

Governor Bickett gave the outgoing seniors some sound advice in his parting address. Never before in the history of the world have any young men been confronted with such an opportunity to mould and color the civilization of the whole world, he declared.

FINAL EXERCISES OF GRADUATING CLASS

1919 Has Strong Come-Back, Though Somewhat Crippled by the War---Class Gift of $1200 Presented---Delivery of Campus to Juniors

The final exercises of the graduating class featured the second day of commencement, Monday, June 16, the chief numbers on the program of which were the senior orations in contest for the Mangum medal, the closing exercises of the outgoing class, the annual debate between representatives of the two literary societies, and the anniversary meetings of the two societies in their respective halls.

1919 Has Strong Come-Back

Although somewhat crippled by the war and things incident thereto, the class of '19, with 87 graduates, presented a come-back spirit worthy of the highest commendation. Most of its members were in the service when the war ended, and only by sheer pluck and hard work were they able to graduate.

Professor Williams Sounds Warning

Class Day exercises were opened at 9:30 A.M. when the seniors formed in front of Memorial Hall and marched to Chapel for prayer. The late Dr. Kemp P. Battle was not there to sound the parting admonition to the outgoing graduates, as had been his custom for many years in the past.

Prof. Horace Williams spoke to them this time. He called the attention of the graduates to the fact that they are at this time face to face with conditions of greatest significance and danger, in the depths of which are relentless currents seeking to pull people under.

"Be strong," he warned, "for in a similar time Christ brought us lessons of supreme hope."

The world has destroyed countless amounts of the earth's wealth and in this period of reconstruction the strain, especially on the moral fibre, will be too much for the survival of some, he said.

"In the words of the poet," concluded Professor Williams, "'America is calling today: send me men to match my mountains and send me men to match my plains.'"

Class Gift of $1200

The public exercises were opened in Gerrard Hall at 10:30 a. m., Luther H. Hodges, president of the senior class, presiding. J. C. Bynum, of Durham, presented the class gift, turning over to the University through the alumni loyalty fund $1,200 to be used for the purchase and installation of a tower clock to go in the south building, after this building has been remodeled.

Hodge's Farewell Address

Luther Hodges, class president, in a short farewell address, well expressed the heart-felt love of the class for alma mater, referring particularly to the many members of the class who were absent in service last fall. He likened the seniors to the children of a mother who is the University. Before bidding farewell to the University and community, President Hodges expressed the appreciation of the class of the interest and co-operation manifested by the faculty and townspeople.

Mangum Medal Contest

The meeting was then turned over to President H. W. Chase, who conducted the Mangum medal oratorical contest. The speakers were R. F. Moseley, of Clinton, on "Industrial Democracy;" Nathan G. Gooding, of New Bern, on "The Advance of a Principle;" Luther H. Hodges, of Leaksville, on "World Peace or Allied Peace?" William E. Price, of Madison, on "An Honest Practice of a Campus Ideal."

W. E. Price, it was announced on Commencement Day, won the Mangum medal.

Closing Exercises of Class

The closing exercises of the senior class were held under the Davie Poplar at 5:30 Monday afternoon. Seated around the venerable tree in a semi-circle, the graduates tied the lasting knots of friendship. The scene was a most impressive one.

The class history was narrated by E. S. Lindsey. J. L. Aycock furnished some interesting class statistics. W. H. Williamson recited the class poem. H. G. West was responsible for making the last will and testament of 1919. The task of prophesying the class' future was undertaken by W. E. Price.

Delivery of Campus to Juniors

The delivery of the campus to the care of the juniors was another ceremony that stood out for its impressiveness. Following a short and appropriate speech by President Hodges, of the seniors, to President J. P. Washburn, of the juniors, the juniors marched into the circle of the seniors and lustily cheered the outgoing class.

Di Wins the Debate

The Dialectic Literary Society, represented by S. H. Willis and R. B. Gwynn, won the commencement debate which was held on Monday night. Mr. Gwynn, who was judged the best speaker on the winning side, also won the Bingham medal.

"Resolved, That with respect to immigration and citizenship the United States should accord to the citizens of China and Japan the same privileges as extended to citizens of European nations," was the query debated.

The Di representatives were opposed by L. W. Jarman and T. S. Kittrell, of the Phi Society, who championed the negative side of the question.

John W. Umstead, an alumnus of Greensboro, presided over the debate. Forrest Miles served as secretary.

Anniversary Meetings

The anniversary meetings of the two societies were held in the halls of the two respective organizations, following the debate. Many alumni members of both societies joined in the get-together affairs and for several hours the ancient halls resounded with the voices of men who took an active part in this phase of campus life during their campus days at Chapel Hill. The students also had a part on the program.

Short pithy speeches expressing loyalty for the literary organizations and appreciation of the benefits derived therefrom were made by many alumni and students. Frequent spurts of good-natured humor served to break the ice and make the meetings of free-for-all informal nature.

In the Phi Hall

Following the gathering in the Phi hall, N. G. Gooding, student president, turned over the chair to E. A. Council, of Morehead City, '04, who had been elected to preside over the meeting. Those speaking included Fred Archer, '04, of Greensboro; Judge W. P. Harding, '04, of Charlotte; C. B. Ruffin, '09, of Bishopville, S. C.; D. B. Teague, '10, of Sanford; Isaac Wright, '05, of Clinton; Albert M. Coates, '18, of Smithfield; R. H. Wright, '97, of Greenville; John W. Umstead, '09, of Greensboro; Cyrus Thompson, Jr., '11, of Chapel Hill; Benjamin Wyche, '94, of Charlotte; Frank Spruill, '07, of Lexington; R. F. Moseley, '19, of Clinton; Claude Teague, of Wilson; McCauley Costner, '07, of Raleigh.

In the Di Hall

In the Di hall, President William M. York turned over the presidential chair to George S. Steele, '89, of Rockingham, although O. C. Cox, '09, of Greensboro, gave him a good run for the place. Those making short talks included Charles A. Webb, '89, of Asheville; John Johnson, '09, of Hillsboro; Connor Brown, '99; Oscar J. Coffin, '09, of Raleigh; O. C. Cox, '09, of Greensboro; Willie P. Grier, '09, of Statesville; Wayland Cook, of Greensboro; Dr. W. D. Moss, of Chapel Hill; C. A. Hodges, of Greensboro; Dr. Jas. K. Hall, of Richmond; T. Gilbert Pearson, of New York City; J. R. Weaver, of Weaverville; Henry Clarke Smith, of Arizona; L. H. Ranson, '14, of Huntersville; R. L. Lasley, '14, of Wentworth; M. R. Dunnagan, '14, of Winston-Salem; R. O. Miller, of Mooresville; A. R. Newsome, '15, of Chapel Hill; H. M. Hopkins, '19, of Ohio; N. C. Thompson and Captain Keiger.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON BY DR. J. E. WHITE

The annual baccalaureate sermon, which was preached by Rev. John Ellington White, D.D., president of Anderson College and pastor of the first Baptist Church of Anderson, S. C., formally opened the University's 124th Commencement on Sunday, June 15. It was one of the most powerful discourses ever heard by a Chapel Hill audience and made a decidedly profound impression. Dr. White was formerly pastor of several churches in this State.

Dr. White chose for his text Acts 17; 30: "The times of ignorance therefore God overlooked; but now He commandeth men that they should all everywhere to repent; because He hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world by that man whom He hath sent."

The theme of the sermon was "Repentance" as the indispensable moral necessity of the world's reconstruction. He made impressive the stern background of disorder and disaster and the world-wide confusion of civilization, and pointed out the evil principles and forces which have wrought their logical consequences upon mankind.

Repentance is Fundamental

"It is not natural, but moral phenomena," he said, "which furnishes the data of interpretation for this disastrous epoch. The birds sang blithely in the trenches; the flowers bloomed in Flanders fields; and nature was not at war. It was from the mind and heart of man the devilish emotions proceeded. Therefore it is in the minds and hearts of men today the reconstructive process must arise. Unless men change their minds and turn human thought and feeling against ideas and ideals which have brought catastrophe, there is no hope that society has any future of safety and progress."

The refrain of the sermon was "repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." "But the kingdom of hell is also at hand," the preacher declared, "because the reaction against paganistic motives and materialistic emotions is not positive. At this moment the most obtrusive fact is that no one seems sure that the world is not plunging on into deeper sorrows. Hope sits precariously upon the blood-smeared earth playing on her faint harp of one lone string. We do hope, and many pray, that civilization will emerge on a friendlier basis with a co-operate disposition, but the facts at this hour are not reassuring. Hope is not enough, and faith is not enough, repentance is the fundamental condition which God requires and man must experience before there is any solid ground for the feet of civilization.

Vesper Services Held

Vesper services, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., were conducted at 8 p. m. under the venerable Davie Poplar by the Rev. W. D. Moss, of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church.

Selecting as his text, "Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile go with him twain," Dr. Moss said that life is two things. It is free and it is under compulsion. How are we to be free and at the same time meet the demands of compulsion? he asked.

"Some individuals fight their compulsions and do as they please and they wreck their lives. Others yield to the stern necessity that is laid upon them and become absorbed in the cause. They wreck their lives, too. They are creatures of their environment, slaves of authority.

"Jesus Christ called men into the full, glad, free life of the spirit. And when we learn to walk in the spirit we will both hold our individual desires in check and find a place in our experience for all the legitimate compulsions that are laid upon us," he said.

"Ours is a great age of compulsion," the minister warned. "More than at any time in the past demands of every nature are going to be made upon us. How are we going to meet them? The only hope for us in these most strenuous days is the Gospel of the spirit that leaves a man bigger in his compulsions and in a happy and intelligent mood toward the same."

BUILDINGS NEARING COMPLETION

The new Engineering Building, which is to be known as Phillips Hall, is rapidly nearing completion and will be ready for occupation by September, according to present plans. This handsome structure, which is being erected at a minimum cost of $125,000, will be the home of the Electrical and Civil Engineering, Physics, and Mathematics departments.

Several of the old buildings on the campus will also be remodeled and renovated during the summer.

Plans are under consideration for the erection of new dormitories in the immediate future to take care of the great influx of students expected.

Along with this progress in building on the campus comes the construction of a new Presbyterian Church and post office. Both will be completed before September, with a cost of approximately $50,000 each.

TO WELCOME FRESHMEN

This year's freshman class at the State University has the distinction and pride of being the initial first year class to put into actual operation a movement on the campus whereby next year's freshmen will receive a hearty welcome from the sophomores as soon as they land on the Hill, not the "rah-rah" sort of greeting that will send the new men shivering to their rooms for seclusion, but the kind of welcome that will have as its aim the interpretation of life on the campus to the raw students and their assimilation of the "Carolina spirit," as it is termed.

Not that sophomore classes at the University of recent years have entertained malignant designs for the first year men. In fact, there has been not a single case of hazing on the campus since the tragic Rand episode of 1912. And the spirit of the sophomore classes has been termed nothing short of excellent.

But the rising sophomore class at a final get-together meeting of the year held here in Swain hall Saturday night, June 7th, decided unanimously to break away from the semi-neutral attitude held toward the freshmen in the past and instead to extend open arms to them from the first moment they arrive at the University.

In other words, each sophomore will appoint himself a committee to look after the new men when they come to Chapel Hill next fall, and to help them find themselves by co-operating with them in every way possible.

Albert M. Coates started this movement last year.

BURDICK PRIZE IN JOURNALISM

A new annual prize, to be known as the Burdick Prize in Journalism, has been established at the University through the generosity of Mrs. Julia W. Burdick, of Asheville, in memory of her son Edmund Burdick, of the class of 1920, who died in his sophomore year in the midst of a brilliant and promising career.

Mrs. Ray, of Fayetteville, has established a scholarship in memory of her son, Don Fairfax Ray, who died in the service of his country.

CHANGES IN THE FACULTY

Some important changes in the University faculty for next year were announced by President Chase at Commencement.

The following are promoted from associate to full professors: J. H. Hanford, professor of English; Norman Foerster, professor of English; J. G. Beard, professor of Pharmacy.

From instructor to assistant professor: A. W. Hobbs, of the department of Mathematics.

Dr. J. M. Bell was made Smith professor of Chemistry.

The additions to the faculty for the coming year are as follows: Dr. Edgar W. Knight, professor of Rural Education; Chas. N. Baker, assistant librarian; C. A. Hubbard, assistant professor of English; Paul J. Weaver, professor of Community Music; S. H. Hobbs, assistant professor of Rural Economics.

The faculty has lost by resignation the following: Robert L. James, assistant professor of Drawing; Edward Mack, assistant professor of Chemistry; John M. Stedman, instructor in English; William F. Morrison, instructor in Drawing; James V. Whitfield, instructor in Military Science; Mrs. Thomas W. Lingle, adviser to women.

Killed in action: Joseph Henry Johnston, assistant professor of School Administration.

SOUTH CAROLINA TRUSTEES PAY VISIT

The board of trustees of the University of South Carolina, including Governor R. A. Cooper, visited the University on May 24th and 25th for the purpose of inspecting the University plant and equipment. President W. S. Currell, of the South Carolina University, also accompanied the trustees.

The visiting committee of the University of North Carolina board, composed of W. N. Everett, C. G. Wright, Graham Kenan and Z. V. Walzer, accompanied by Governor Bickett, met the visitors in Chapel Hill and conferred with them.

Conferences were held with the faculty members, when matters pertaining to the organization and administration of a University were discussed. Student activities and conduct also came up for consideration at a conference with the student council.

TRUSTEES HOLD IMPORTANT MEETINGS

Two unusually important meetings of the Board of Trustees were held during commencement week, the first in Raleigh, on Monday, June 16th, which resulted in the election of Dr. H. W. Chase as president, and the second on Tuesday night at the University, at which the regular business of the year was passed upon.

Dr. Chase Elected

Dr. Chase's election followed a prolonged session devoted to hearing the report of the special committee appointed to investigate the qualifications of those suggested to succeed the late President Graham. Five hours were consumed in the reading of the report. During the reading, an opinion was rendered by Attorney-General Manning, at the request of Governor Bickett, to the effect that in conformity with an act passed by the General Assembly of 1909, members of the Board were disqualified from holding positions in institutions of which they were trustees. This ruling, which was generally upheld by the Board, automatically removed from consideration the names of Secretary Daniels and Mr. R. D. W. Connor, both of whom had been prominently mentioned in connection with the position. Upon the conclusion of the report, nominations were called for, and the first ballot was taken in which Dr. Chase received 26 votes, Dr. Howard Rondthaler 22, President F. L. McVey, of the University of Kentucky, 9, Dr. Archibald Henderson 4, and Dr. I. F. Lewis and Herman Harrell Horne, 2 each. The second ballot resulted in the election of Dr. Chase, with 41 votes, and upon the third ballot the choice was made unanimous.

Meeting at Chapel Hill

In addition to adoption of the report of the Visiting Committee, which covered the detailed plans of the University for the coming year, the Trustees transacted the following business at the Tuesday night meeting:

A committee consisting of President Chase, Gen. J. S. Carr, and Maj. John W. Graham, was appointed to erect suitable monuments over the graves of the late President and Mrs. Graham.

Governor Bickett was authorized to appoint a committee of three Trustees to act with similar committees from the alumni and faculty, to provide suitable tablets in Memorial Hall in memory of the alumni who lost their lives in the world war.

A committee of three Trustees was appointed to act with President Chase and two members of the faculty to be selected by the faculty in formulating a policy for the use of the Kenan fund. The recommendations of the committee are to be submitted to the Board at the January meeting. R. D. W. Connor, Haywood Parker, and J. K. Wilson were named as Trustee representatives.

It was resolved that the University should provide for the support, education, and care of Edward Kidder Graham, Jr., until he reaches his majority. President Chase, M. C. S. Noble, Josephus Daniels, R. D. W. Connor, and W. N. Everett were appointed to formulate plans for the carrying out of the resolution.

Governor Bickett was authorized to appoint a committee of five Trustees to co-operate with a committee from the faculty to make necessary arrangements for the inauguration of President Chase.

The committees of which Col. J. Bryan Grimes and John Sprunt Hill, respectively, have been chairmen, and which have been devoting attention to the development of University grounds, were combined into one, to which President Chase and C. T. Woolen were added. The new committee was authorized to employ a landscape engineer and carry forward such plans for the future growth of the University as seemed advisable.

Resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Marvin Hendrix Stacy were presented and spread upon the minutes of the Board.

R. O. T. C. AT UNIVERSITY

Maj. F. W. Boye, who has been detailed by the government to establish the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, has arrived on the Hill and is busily engaged in making the preliminary arrangements preparatory to putting the unit into full operation next fall.

TO ESTABLISH SCHOOL OF COMMERCE AND FINANCE

Beginning its operation next fall, a School of Commerce and Finance will be established at the University. The School of Commerce is a feature that has been needed for a long time. Many students desiring courses which would be in the direct line of the business in which they expected to engage have found only meager facilities at the University for life preparation. The new School of Commerce and Finance will include the present Departments of Economics and of Rural Economics and Sociology, and will offer all the courses now offered in these departments, in addition to a large number of specialized courses. The particular heads under which these new courses will come are those of Business Organization and Management, Accounting, and Commerce and Marketing.

GRAHAM MEMORIAL FUND REACHES HALF-WAY GOAL

It was announced at Commencement by Secretary Albert M. Coates that $70,000 had already been subscribed to the Graham Memorial Fund. The larger towns of the State, including Charlotte, Raleigh, Durham, Asheville, Wilmington, and Greensboro, have not yet launched the movement, although plans for pushing it to a speedy and successful close are being formulated in each instance.

Every local director in each community is being strongly urged to make a thorough canvass as early as possible. Those alumni who do not get in touch with the directors are requested to make individual subscriptions by mail or in person to Secretary Coates.

With $70,000 already subscribed, the half-way mark of the $150,000 goal has been practically reached. The fact that the majority of the directors have not yet sent in their reports apparently gives confident assurance that the amount asked for will be oversubscribed.

SUMMER SCHOOL HAS LARGE ATTENDANCE

The 32nd session of the University Summer School, under the direction of Dr. Walker, opened on June 24th with every indication of the most successful term in its history.

As THE REVIEW goes to press, the registration stands at 875. Many more students will be coming in during the six weeks' term, and the total registration for the session is expected to go beyond the 1,000 mark.

UNIVERSITY ALUMNI BUY "CITIZEN"

The Asheville Citizen, Asheville's morning newspaper, was purchased by three prominent University alumni on March 1st, namely, George Stephens, '96, of Charlotte; Chas. A. Webb, '89, of Asheville; and Haywood Parker, '87, of Asheville. Mr. Stephens is a capitalist of Charlotte, and Mr. Webb is United States Marshal, while Mr. Parker is an attorney of Asheville.

The University will have a Public Health Officer next year.

THE UNIVERSITY IN LETTERS

A fitting memorial to the late Edward Graham, which in itself serves as a monument to his thinking and his labors, is the volume appearing with the title "Education and Citizenship and Other Papers" (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London, 1919). The selection of the contents and the general work of editing was done by Dr. L. R. Wilson, with the assistance of Professors H. W. Chase and Edwin Greenlaw. The volume is prefaced with a brief but appropriate introduction by President Edwin A. Alderman, of the University of Virginia. The contents of the volume readily fall under four headings: Education and Democracy, Culture and Citizenship, Student and College Relations, Occasional Papers. No extended or detailed review of the volume seems necessary in this publication, when so many of President Graham's utterances have already found publication during the years of his energetic leadership here, as dean, acting-president, and president. Suffice it to say that the volume, as it stands, is a vision of the mind and heart of the young scholar and clean thinker, who wrought out his philosophy in his life and made his ideals of education prevail in an extraordinarily vigorous and enduring fashion. His fundamental and expressed ideal was to plan the University "in harmony with the spirit of modern democracy;" and these finely-chiseled essays amply demonstrated the persistence of his efforts and the fidelity of his impulses in translating the ideal into a harmonious and well-ordered reality.

An article of unusual interest, original, provocative, and full of "dynamite," is "Reconstructing the Ph.D. in English," by Professor Norman Foerster, of the English Department (The Nation, Spring Educational Supplement, May 10, 1919). The article is significant of the reconstruction spirit which is abroad in the land today; and challenges attention by the vigor of its indictments and the revolutionary nature of its proposals. The author divides men into three classes: the scientific investigator, the dilettante, and the humanist. In his view, the new era calls most, not for the first two, but for the last; and an outline for the studies and discipline, according to the humanistic standard, is briefly sketched. The groundwork for the candidate's training is found chiefly—more than half of it—in the English Department; and the remainder in such subjects as Philosophy, History, the Classics, Comparative Literature, and Modern Languages other than English. The thesis is posited to be a "critical dissertation, giving proof of the candidate's wide and well-assimilated reading and, especially, of his ability to think, of his love of ideas." There is every reason to believe that the suggestions contained in this article will provoke thought and wide discussion.

In the National Magazine for April, 1919, there is an interesting and stimulating article, fully illustrated, entitled "The Father of Rural Credits in North Carolina." The author is Mr. S. R. Winters, now head of the Washington Bureau of the Raleigh News and Observer. The article is an appreciation of Mr. John Sprunt Hill, of Durham, and an estimate of his labors in North Carolina since 1903, principally with reference to his work in fathering a chain of co-operating farmers' credit societies in this State.

Valuable and elaborately documental leaflets, issued by the University Extension Bureau, are A Syllabus of Comparative Government and National Ideals, by Professor W. W. Pierson, Jr.; Studies in the Social and Industrial Condition of Women as Affected by the War, by Mrs. T. W. Lingle; and A Course on Americanization, being studies of the people and the movements that are building up the American Nation, also by Mrs. Lingle.

Lieut.-Col. Wm. C. Harlee, whose address is 1753 Lamont St., Washington, D. C., is a member of the National Board for the promotion of rifle practice.

CITATIONS

Ernest Graves, '00

—Awarded the distinguished service cross by General Pershing. He is a native of Chapel Hill. Holds the rank of colonel. The citation follows:

“Col. Ernest Graves—For exceptional meritorious conduct and distinguished services. He was charged with the construction of the Gievres storage depot and later was appointed engineer officer of the Intermediate Section, Services of Supply, where he was placed in charge of all construction projects west of Bourges. As engineer officer of Base Section No. 2, and of the Advance Section S.O.S., he performed the duties with which he was instructed in a conspicuously meritorious manner. In the many responsible capacities in which he was employed, the performance of his duty was characterized by sound judgment and inspiring zeal.”

—Awarded, posthumously, the distinguished service cross for heroic conduct during an attack in the Bellicourt area, in which he was killed while rendering aid to his stricken comrades. He was a member of the 119th infantry of the 30th division.

Mrs. Ray has lately received from Claude W. Allen of Creedmoor a letter giving further particulars of her son's death. “I was with him when he was wounded,” wrote the Creedmoor man, “and carried him in my arms into a tunnel, where, with one more, we dressed his wound and carried him back through shell fire to where the ambulance could take him.”

“I don't believe,” said the letter from Mr. Allen, “you will grieve over his death when I tell you what a noble death he died and what a great cause he was engaged in. Right in the front, going over the top, giving his life to relieve and aid suffering men, he was known to all of us as a fearless man when duty called him.”

According to Mr. Allen, Captain Ray was wounded on September 30 and not on September 29, as Mrs. Ray supposed. On this Allen writes: “He was wounded about 6 o'clock on September 30, on the main Hindenburg line, about three hundred yards to the left of Bellicourt. We went over the top on Sunday morning, September 29, at 5:50. We broke and captured the Hindenburg line and were using the tunnel that you heard so much talk of as an aid station when Captain Ray was wounded. He stepped out of the tunnel to show a friend of his to headquarters when we heard him call us. We looked and saw him fall about ten feet away. I rushed to him, took him in my arms and brought him back in the tunnel, where we dressed his wound.”

Joseph Henry Johnston, '10

—Awarded the distinguished service cross, posthumously, recently. Lieutenant Johnston was killed in action in France on October 15.

Benjamin H. Bunn, '10

—Awarded the croix de guerre for extraordinary bravery displayed in action. Lieutenant Bunn was with the 371st infantry, which figured most conspicuously in the campaign offensive of September 25, 1918, although the regiment lost 67 per cent in casualties. That its bravery and prowess, its spirit of sacrifice was recognized by the French is attested by the fact that the regiment was cited as a whole for extraordinary heroism. The regimental flag was decorated by the French on February 1, at Brest, on the eve of the departure for home.

Lieutenant Bunn was commissioned at Fort Oglethorpe in the initial officers' training camp. He went to Camp Jackson and there trained the colored boys for duty overseas. The regiment embarked for France in April, 1918, and in due time reached the port of Brest.

Robert Bruce Mason, '13

—Awarded French croix de guerre. He is at present a first lieutenant of the third machine gun battalion, first division, American expeditionary forces, and is with the army of occupation in Germany.

Newspaper articles and letters signed by commanding officers show that Lieutenant Mason distinguished himself in no small degree. He was especially gallant in the Argonne forest battle and wears the French croix de guerre as a token of the appreciation felt by the French army officers.

At the end of a citation for the Durham boy, C. A. Davis, major, 3rd machine gun battalion, in a few words tells the story of gallantry. They are as follows:

“Recommended for captaincy.

“Recommended for a distinguished service cross.

“Recommended for a croix de guerre.”

The citation reads as follows:

“The battalion commander cites the following officer for marked efficiency and devotion to duty:

“First Lieut. Robert B. Mason, third machine gun battalion, first division, American expeditionary forces.

“An officer of marked efficiency, zeal and loyalty. Has throughout his service in the division shown himself a model of soldiery character and has, in the discharge of his duties as a platoon commander, at all times given proof of the characteristics that have marked the best officers of the third machine gun battalion and the first division, to wit: loyalty, self-denial, zeal and efficiency.”

William John Hoover, '16

—Awarded the French croix de guerre with palm and distinguished service cross, the former for heroic conduct displayed in action on the battle front on July 2, 1918, and the latter for bravery in aerial combat with the famous Richthofen circus on the western front. He entered the first Oglethorpe camp in May, 1917, and was sent to Toronto to a Canadian flying school, where he won his commission in the aviation service. He went early to France. Captain Hoover is now stationed at Rockwell Field, Coronado, Cal., 952 "I" avenue. His citation and decoration order reads:

"The commander-in-chief, in the name of the President, has awarded the distinguished service cross to the following named officer for the act of extraordinary heroism described after his name:

"First Lieut. William Jack Hoover, aviation section, 27th aero squadron. For extraordinary heroism in action near Verdilly, France, July 2, 1918. On the morning of July 2 his flight patrol encountered the famous Richthofen circus. Lieut. Hoover was simultaneously attacked by three of the enemy and cut off from his comrades. By skilfully maneuvering he avoided the effects of their concentrated fire and fearlessly attacked the three. Although his machine was seriously damaged, he killed one of the enemy pilots and destroyed his plane, drove down another, apparently out of control, and chased the third far into his own lines. He then continued the patrol until shortage of gasoline forced him to return."

James A. Hardison, Jr., '16

—Cited for extraordinary bravery in action in the fighting around Verdun. He attended the first Oglethorpe camp and was assigned to the 81st division. He holds the rank of first lieutenant.

Noel Edward Patton, '17

—Awarded the distinguished service cross for extraordinary heroism displayed in action. The citation reads:

"Sergeant Noel E. Patton, Company A, 344th battalion, tank corps (A.S. No. 8669). For extraordinary heroism in action near Woel, France, September 14, 1918. While on a reconnaissance patrol under heavy machine gun fire Sergeant Patton was seriously wounded and ordered to the rear. Refusing to seek safety, he crawled to the assistance of two comrades, whom he had seen disappear under a burst of shrapnel, and with one arm useless, attempted to render aid while he was himself suffering from loss of blood. Home address, Mrs. J. L. Allen, mother, Fayetteville, N. C."

1899H. M. WAGSTAFF, Secretary, Chapel Hill, N. C.

—This is to inform the members of 1899 who were absent at the reunion, June 15-18, that you were unfortunate in not being here. Twenty-six of us answered the roll-call, and our great pleasure at being together was dampened only by your absence. Nevertheless, we knew you were present in spirit, and not a name went uncanvassed or failed of a strong thought-wave for your welfare. The fine spirit of fellowship which always characterized our class proved to have lost none of its vigor. Palm-pressure was no mere formality among the men of '99. Not a man but felt his spirit refreshed by the contact with his fellows. We found our alma mater bigger and better, but that to go on to higher service still she needs our individual and collective forethought and loyalty supreme.

Our class president, J. S. Carr, Jr., marshalled our strength at the alumni luncheon, and, with the wives present, we made no mean representation at that gathering. T. Gilbert Pearson served brilliantly as our spokesman, adroitly diverting the great audience to the moods of nature and the didoes of birds.

At a largely attended class caucus it was unanimously agreed that our quarter-century reunion in 1924 must be made the greatest ever. Also the class mug to the oldest boy was awarded to Bryan Grimes, aged 13 years, 10 months and 27 days, son of June Grimes, attorney, Washington, N. C. This gift will go forward in due course. Other class matters were attended to at this meeting, of which the secretary will inform you by ordinary process.

Altogether for the next mile-post in 1924!

The Story of Your Study Lamp

IF you were studying by an old smoky oil lamp and suddenly a modern, sun-like MAZDA lamp were thrust into the room, the contrast would be dazzling. That instant would unfold the result of thirty years' development, research and manufacturing in electric lighting.

FIRST

And this development commenced with Edison's first lamp—hand-made, when electricity was rare.

The General Electric Company was a pioneer in foreseeing the possibilities of Edison's invention. Electric generators were developed. Extensive experiments led to the design and construction of apparatus which would obtain electric current from far-away waterfalls and deliver it to every city home.

With power lines well distributed over the country, the use of electric lighting extended. Street lighting developed from the flickering arc to the great white way. Electric signs and floodlights made our cities brilliant at night, searchlights turned night into day at sea, and miniature lamps were produced for the miner's headlight and automobile.

While the making of the electrical industry, with its many, many interests, was developing, the General Electric Company's laboratories continued to improve the incandescent lamp, and manufacturing and distributing facilities were provided, so that anyone today can buy a lamp which is three times as efficient as the lamp of a few years ago.

One often hears that comment. Settling an estate successfully calls for more than good intentions. Principally it calls for years of "knowing how."
